

Much or many?

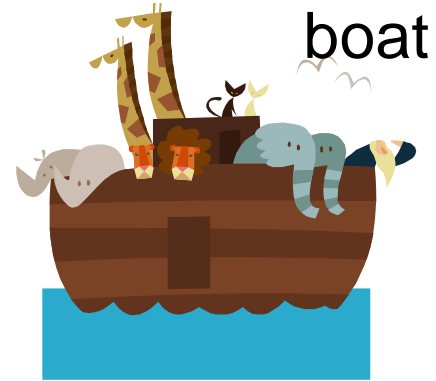

Can you count these things?

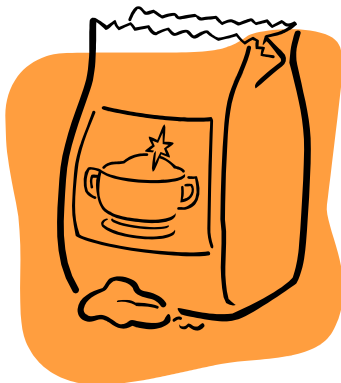

flower

sand

water

sugar

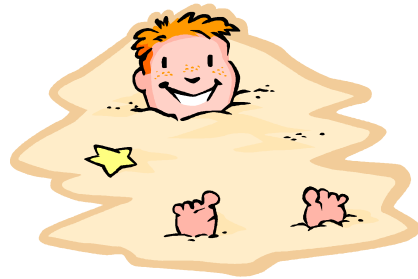

grape

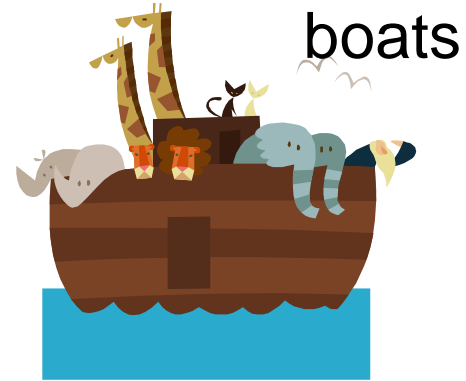

Do they make sensible plurals?

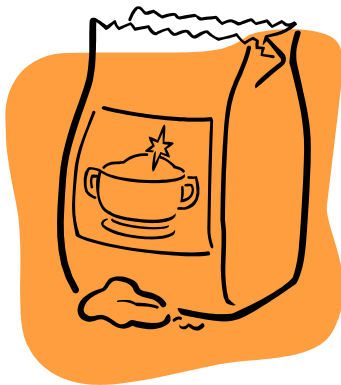

flowers

sands

waters

sugars

grapes

If you can count it, use 'many'

- Too many flowers

If you can count it, use 'many'

- I ate so many grapes that I felt sick

If you can count it, use 'many'

- How many boats can you see?

If you can't count it, use 'much'

- How much sand do you need?

If you can't count it, use 'much'

There is too much water on the floor!
Clean it up!

Much or many?

- For plurals, use many
- For non-countable things, use much

How much orange juice do you want?

There were too many people in the queue, so I didn't wait.

He put so much salt in the soup that it tasted
horrible.

The teacher
gave us too
much homework.

I saw
many toucans in the tree.

Now try these

1. You are making too _____ noise!
2. How _____ sugar do you want in your tea?
3. How _____ apples are there?
4. Why are there so _____ policemen here?
5. How _____ chicken do you want?
6. How _____ chickens did you buy?
7. He has told me that so _____ times!
8. I have too _____ work to do.